Deepak Jain, the Founder Chairman of the Amity College – Florida born in a family bound with strong ethical principles and high moral values. He is raised with strict religious Jainism tradition and has been close to Hinduism and Buddhist customs. In his childhood he attended numerous camps for moral & religious educations and spiritual practices organized by temples and religious societies in India.

Since his childhood, Deepak has been watching the positive effects of religious practices on human lives and noticed extreme friendliness of nature towards religious souls. He experienced the trueness embedded in Vedas, Puranas, Mantras, Shlokas, and other historic religious texts.

Highly captivated with the positive effects of religious practices on his life, Deepak started studying Jain Puranas (ancient religious texts), Ramayana, Mahabharata, and many other religious texts including some parts of Bible too. He started practicing Yoga and meditation and experienced the possessions of additional energies, feelings, and thoughts towards betterment of humanity. He started utilizing his superfluous energies for social services and counselling purposes.

Gradually, Deepak turned into a visionary developed with immense working experience in spiritual practices, religious considerations, research, academics, and corporates augmented with spiritual lights and a confidence of being near to God, more recognized as “Prof. Jain”.

Prof. Jain is a member of International Association of Buddhist Universities (IABU). He is author of several books and research papers. Other than many other prestigious titles, he has been honored with “President’s Call of Service Award” and Gates & Custodian Person of Year 2013 award in Academic Research category.

In his strict routine of prayers and spiritual activities he emphasis on the need to moral education, and spiritual practices in studies and with these thoughts, he envisioned a non-secular educational institution built on strong base of spirituality to facilitate the coexistence of diversity of beliefs of different religions directed towards uniqueness of God and tagged it as the “Amity College”.

Prof. Jain promotes religious and spiritual education to support spreading of moral values, ethical means of existence, and better sense of responsibilities in human beings. He envisage Amity College as a unique combination of classroom studies and online learning infrastructure to serve as a means of spreading light of knowledge, power of spirituality, and global peace.

Amity College Founder President

Prof. Ken Rabac

Ken Rabac, the Founder President of Amity College, was born into Catholicism in Detroit by virtue of his autoworker parents. His Ukrainian mother and Adriatic father raised him in in the Roman and Greek Catholic traditions. Ken in his youth was mentored by a Monsignor who recognized a religious vocation and deemed him a candidate for priesthood.

Ken encountered an agnostic priest in eighth grade who opened his young mind to alternative, literary, and less literal, biblical interpretations and set the stage for his introduction to Existentialism by a ninth grade English teacher. After mastering all of the great existentialist philosophers, and their Platonic and Aristotelean precursors, Ken was initiated into Buddhism and inducted into Hinduism and Theosophy as a college freshman. Ken began to see Yoga or esoteric unity as the common denominator in world religions. Although urged by Dalai Lama to maintain the religion of your upbringing, Ken has pursued Yoga as a Meditation leader for more than 30 years in Orlando, Florida. Throughout his adult life, Ken has attended both Buddhist and Hindu temples, as well as Church of Religious Science services. For seven years, Ken was the resident Buddhist at Shanti Mandir in Orlando where he was designated as a “sage” or wise man. Ken also served as an associate pastor and pastoral counselor at a Unity Church. He is a member of International Association of Buddhist Universities (IABU).

Ken originally founded Amity College, with state authorization in Florida in 2009, but held off on developing the college until he became acquainted with his collaborator Deepak Jain and formed a spiritual and intellectual alliance, and friendship, strong enough to support this formidable project.

Ken proposes that the non-secular sector will develop into a domain as pervasive as the non-profit sector has become. He envisions Amity College as an institution that will demonstrate the power of spirituality, religion, collaboration, and friendship, contribute to international interfaith peace and understanding, and symbolize his own devotion to Amita (or Amitabha) Buddha, the celestial bodhisatva symbolizing deep awareness, ultimate friendship and immeasurable light and infinite life. Amity is the quality associated with this Buddha and especially emphasized in the method of Pure Land Buddhism embraced at the Buddhist Cultural Center (Phap Vu Temple) in Orlando where Ken conducts English services and Mindfulness Meditations weekly.

Ken envisions Amity College as an institution that will demonstrate the power of spirituality, and religion, contribute to international interfaith peace and symbolize his own devotion to Amita Buddha, the celestial bodhisatva symbolizing deep awareness and infinite life.
